2021 Best Places to WorkBenchmarking Study Insights

Australian employees have had a rough ride over the past 18 months. The COVID-19 crisis has turned their world upside down, both at work and at home. Where we work, the way we work, even if we work, has changed for most of the workforce. We are in the middle of a global crisis, and we may not even realise when it comes to an end. While we seem to get caught up in debating if and how the crisis will forever change the future of work and workplaces, it is important that we also focus on helping employees land on their feet and readjust in this constantly evolving situation.

Something that has not changed over the last 18 months is that employees want to be engaged with their role and organisation, collaborate with their team members, and upskill themselves. What has changed in the last 18 months is that these experiences now happen without the social structures of an office.

Understanding how employees feel, and how it is affecting their performance today has been a focus of the 2021 Best Places to Work. An engaged, motivated team is a productive team. On average, the Best organisations increased their headcount by 9.35% and revenue by 25% over the last 12 months.

Employee experience will be a crucial factor in business success after COVID-19.

Its importance is too great to be left to just HR leaders or any one department to manage. It is something that must be woven throughout the organisation and sustained throughout the employee lifecycle if the benefits are to be earned.

The best leaders will find that if they invest in employees, employees will invest in them.

Learning & Development

Every employee plays a role in the organisation achieving its objectives. Maximising the employee potential in turn maximises the organisations potential. Empowered employees increase the productivity and effectiveness of the workplace as they have the tools, direction, and support to make the best use of their skills and abilities.

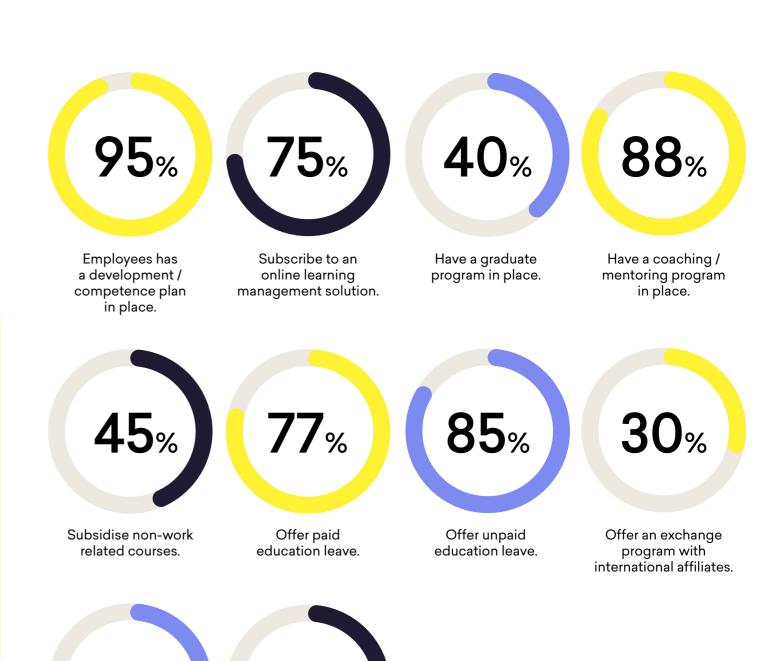

Empowering employees starts with providing them the tools and resources necessary to not only do the role they are hired to do, but also to be able to make decisions in the workplace with confidence.

Support for employees' professional development exhibits respect for employee's professional worth and it cultivates an engaged, dedicated, and well trained workforce. This encourages employees to recognise the importance of their jobs and to feel that management is invested in their ability to accomplish their work.

Development opportunities are typically a key driver of employee retention, particularly for the talented employees.

Frequent and meaningful conversations about expectations, progress skills development and strengths around performance goals and sufficient support to meet those goals also contribute to a more positive view around work life balance.

Wellbeing & Support

Good employee experience has a direct and positive impact on an employee's productivity and level of engagement. Employee experience goes far beyond the list of benefits provided, it is an integration of benefits, physical environment, values, and the organisation's culture.

These factors make employees feel energised about working. Increasingly, employee experience is seen as a more wholistic way to approach employee engagement. Great workplaces are also those in which leaders aim to create caring working environment, where employees feel treated like individuals, where differences are nurtured, and flexibility is provided to meet personal and company needs.

Attention to health and safety is primarily about being responsible; it also makes business sense and should be regarded just as important as the achievement of any other key business objective. Not only does it prevent accidents and work-related ill health, a focus on health and safety reduces accident losses, improves profit and loss statements, and helps companies become more efficient. Providing health and safety information and training also aids in developing a positive health and safety culture, where safe and healthy working becomes second nature to everyone.

Work-life balance is about creating and maintaining supportive and healthy work environments, which will enable employees to have a manageable equilibrium between work and personal responsibilities, reducing continual and ongoing stress and thus strengthening employee loyalty and productivity.

Employees perceive flexibility in when, where, and how they achieve their work commitments to be a key factor in maintaining their motivation and commitment to their employer.

Corporate Social Responsibility

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) is the way that a company gives back to and takes care of the community it is located in and the greater society we are all a part of. Not only is CSR crucial to recruiting talented employees, it is also a great way to maintain the engagement of your existing workforce. Employees who feel good about how an organisation contributes to community, and often its environmental stance, are proud of its impact on society which, in turn, creates a stronger sense of commitment in the workplace.

Giving back boosts employee morale in that their work means something bigger than the role itself and can often indirectly help build networks and foster innovation and creativity.

Offer paid time off to employees for the purpose of volunteering in a community project or charitable organisation.

Diversity & Inclusion

An inclusive workplace culture is critical for attracting the best talent and ensuring that all employees contribute optimally to meet the organisation's goals. Organisations that have succeeded in creating an inclusive workplace culture have been able to align diversity and put together inclusion strategies with key business objectives such as revenue growth and increased customer satisfaction.

Leaders model equality by treating employees fairly, regardless of personal characteristics. Justice is an essential element in creating a level playing field, motivating employees to feel each person can succeed on the basis of their merits, and encouraging teamwork and cooperation.

A sense of fairness or equity is also key to enabling an environment in which employees can be engaged; as such, this is a strength that should be maintained and, where possible, further enhanced. This suggests an environment that allows employees to bring their own unique qualities to the organisation and underlines the organisation's commitment to creating a workplace where fair treatment is part of foundational workplace operations.
